The Value-Adding Leader
(TVAL)

3-day course + assignment

INFORMATION PACK

Thank you for your interest

How could this programme benefit you?

1) Overview

This course is designed for people who work as leaders and who would like to improve their value-adding leadership skills. Successful leaders engage their teams to deliver greater results and to continually find ways of improving products and services to be 'Faster, Better, Cheaper.'

The course covers three essential leadership topics:

Day 1 – Self-Management – a leader needs to act thoughtfully in awareness

Day 2 – Process Improvement – a leader needs to spot waste and refine processes

Day 3 – Communication skills – a leader needs to use language with precision

In addition the course has a short 500 to 1,000 word assignment that invites delegates to reflect on what they have learned and how they have increased their value adding work since the course.

2) Content

The course mixes practical tools and techniques from the world of leadership, lean process improvement and Transactional Analysis. A sample of the three days is shown below:

Designed for team members, supervisors, managers, directors, change agents, improvement specialists, coaches and internal mentors, all delegates become student members of the ILM for 6 months. On completion of the course delegates are awarded a formal ILM Endorsed Certificate, which can be used as evidence of continuous personal development.

ILM Endorsed Programmes are formally accredited to the ILM and have to meet requirements for minimum Guided Learning Hours (GLH) and formally assessed assignments.

2) Learning Outcomes

At the end of the programme delegates will:

1. Have a greater awareness of their own leadership style.
2. Understand process improvement concepts.
3. Be able to find ways to reduce organisational waste.
4. Be able to spot organisational 'Discounting'.
5. Be able to use simple models of communication to inform their thinking and styles of speech.
6. Be able to use assertive and thoughtful leadership approaches.
7. Be able to motivate others in order to make organisational change.
8. Be able to use language more effectively to overcome resistance.
9. Be able to diagnose the cause of conflict and design new interventions.

3) A High Quality Package

We specialise in providing clients with a high quality approach and the course is structured as follows:

- All delegates receive a course folder, containing handouts and ILM information.
- All delegates receive a copy of the book Working it out at Work, the popular and informative introduction to Transactional Analysis by Julie Hay.
- All delegates receive a copy of the Learning Styles Questionnaire, by Honey & Mumford.
- All delegates are formally registered to the ILM as student members for 6 months.
- Workshop Day 1 – taught modules about leadership and building repertoire.
- Workshop Day 2 – taught modules about process improvement and motivating others.
- Optional learning gap to give people a chance to practice new behaviours and to draft assignment.
- Workshop Day 3 – taught modules about communication skills, with a learning review.
- Telephone support, if required, to ensure successful completion of assignment.
- Assignment delivery, assessment and verification. Assessment is about showing learning and application.
- Issue of ILM Endorsed Certificates to delegates.

The ILM endorse management and leadership programmes outside the standard NVQ framework that meet the formal requirements for teaching time and assessment.

4) About Transactional Analysis

One of the best set of tools and techniques for working safely with behaviour at a deeper level, because of the twin foundations of contracting and Okness, Transactional Analysis gives people the awareness and insight to develop emotional intelligence, thoughtful leadership styles and productivity improving language skills.

Developed in the late 1950s by Eric Berne and his colleagues, TA is the study of communications, in terms of what we say to ourselves and how we interact with the world around us. Although its roots are firmly bedded in psychotherapy, it's now also used extensively in a wide variety of public and private organisations, as well as schools and colleges. At its core is a central philosophy that says:

- We are all OK
- We can think for ourselves
- We can choose to make changes

This humanistic approach makes it a natural source of leadership and management tools and the models within TA are easy to learn and use. They can also be a powerful force for change and self-development, because of their deep underpinnings and practical application.
